

Huskers Hang Tough

Lincoln, Ne. — If forced to make a choice, Nebraska head football coach Tom Osborne says he'd rather start slow and finish strong than start strong and finish slow.

That isn't to say Osborne was pleased with the way his Cornhuskers played in the first half of their 31-15 Big Eight victory over Kansas last Saturday afternoon in Memorial Stadium. Nebraska did, however, show the mark of a champion by recovering from its sluggish start and some offensive mistakes to remain the only undefeated and untied team in conference play.

Though KU placekicker Bruce Kallmeyer tied a Memorial Stadium record by kicking five field goals, Nebraska's defense kept the Jayhawks out of the end zone. The Cornhuskers now have gone five games in a row without allowing a touchdown, something which no Nebraska defense has done since 1910.

In the words of junior middle guard Jeff Merrell, the NU defense "bent, but it didn't break."

It was the defense which got the Husker offense rolling, too. Nebraska's first score, a 32-yard field goal by Eddie Neal, was set up by a Merrell fumble recovery, and the Huskers' first two touchdowns, both of which were scored by Phil Bates, followed Kansas turnovers.

Cornerback Rodney Lewis, getting his first start since the Penn State game, intercepted a pass and returned it 31 yards to set up the first, and linebacker Brent Evans recovered a fumble, caused by Lewis and safety Jeff Krejci, to set up the second.

Nebraska got a pair of fourth-quarter touchdowns to ice the game, the first a 17-yard pass from Turner Gill to tight end Jamie Williams, and the second a 49-yard run by I-back Mike Rozier with 1:25 left in the game. Rozier, a sophomore from Camden, N.J., was the game's leading rusher with 179 yards on 22 carries.

Evans was credited with 19 tackles to pace NU's Black Shirt defense.

Jimmy Williams makes the hit on this Kansas ball carrier as the NU defense turned away touchdowns for the fifth straight game.

Phil Bates fights for short yardage against a Kansas defense which played tough early.

Mike Rozier hits daylight and gallops 49 yards for the final Husker score.

This Kansas ball carrier drew a crowd of Huskers, led by Toby Williams.

Turner Gill is set to make the handoff to Mike Rozier as Dan Hurley (73) leads the blocking.

Mike Rozier carries tacklers with him as he fights for extra yardage.

Lockerroom Chatter

The Huskers

Tom Osborne, head coach — "That's the best Kansas team we've played in four or five years. They moved the ball up and down the field on us far too easily. I thought if we had an edge, it would be up front, but they controlled the line of scrimmage throughout the first half. When you're favored over the other team, if you can make things happen early, you can take command. But we gave them encouragement. The early part of a game is so critical. We can't rely each week on making the kind of comeback we made against Kansas. If we don't play any better than we did today, we may not win any of our last three games."

Phil Bates, fullback — "Mike Rozier and Roger Craig are the ones who opened up the middle for me. They're such tremendous threats. I guess Kansas didn't believe I could run. I had a couple of long runs today (Saturday), but I haven't gone all the way yet. When Rozier and Craig get in the open like that, it's almost an automatic touchdown for them."

Rodney Lewis, cornerback — "I played this game for Rodney Lewis. People have said I should play well for the pro scouts or for this and that. Today, I just wanted to play a game for myself, play the way I know how and not care about all that other stuff. That's the way it's going to be for the last three games. If I come up short of somebody else's expectations, I'm sorry."

Jamie Williams, tight end — "We can't think about anyone now except Oklahoma State. We have to play it one game at a time. Any team can beat you on a given day. We didn't push the offensive button until the second half. They were blitzing a lot the first half, and we caught them with it in the second half."

Henry Waechter, defensive tackle — "Maybe our concentration broke down, but poor tackling can be one of any number of reasons. We'll just have to work harder this week. We weren't as aggressive as we've been the last few weeks; at least I know I wasn't."

Dave Rimington, center — "We'd had a good week of practice but got off to a slow start. Sometimes no matter how hard you try, it doesn't seem to work. I thought we weren't fired up enough, but you can't stay up every week like we were against Missouri."

The Jayhawks

Don Fambrough, head coach — "We didn't come up here to play them a close ball game or to say that we played them a good football game. We came to win and got beat by a hell of a football team. Nebraska did one hell of a job. They came back. Maybe we caught them a little flat. I don't know. That's their business. They're a fine football team. When they had to do it, they put it together. They had enough poise and enough discipline that they could come back and get us."

Tim Frelss, strong safety — "Oklahoma has the quicker backs, but Bates, Rozier and Craig run harder than any backs we've seen this year. It's got to be a tossup."

David Lawrence, offensive guard — "Nebraska's defensive line came off the ball; they're big and physical, but we pretty much got after it, too. That's all it took was a couple of mistakes in the fourth quarter. We had one too many fumbles that broke the defense's back."

Bruce Kallmeyer, placekicker — "All my field goals seemed to be good without any doubts. It was just like kicking at home during practice. I kicked the two 49 yarders with the wind, but against the wind, I had to drill the ball a little more. I was glad to get the opportunities. It's too bad we didn't get the points we needed to win. I was in a confident streak, and I thought our chances were good for winning."

Frank Seurer, quarterback — "We wanted to win, and I was confident out there we could today. We were not surprised we played Nebraska close. We were only disappointed we didn't end up on top."

Oregg Smith, noseguard — "We were the only ones in the world that thought we could win. Their fans didn't have much to cheer about the first half, but the second half they woke up and their fans kept them awake."

The Way We See It...

Bob Barry

sports director, KTVY,
Oklahoma City (play-by-play, Cowboy Sports Network)

"Although OSU's defense is not real physical, it's quick and it's solid. Jimmy Johnson is a tremendous defensive mind. He's put together a defense that's close to being as good as anybody's. The problem is the offense. It's been pathetic, not because it hasn't given good effort, but because it's young and doesn't have quite the athletes the defense has.

Oklahoma State cannot get in a scoring contest with anybody. If the Cowboys can keep teams in the 10 to 20 point range, they have a chance, because they have an outstanding kicking game to go with an outstanding defense. Picking from the heart, I'm going to say Oklahoma State 21, Nebraska 19. You don't expect it to happen, but who would have expected Iowa State to lose at Kansas State?"

Mark Ahmann

KAMI Radio, Cozad

"Season begins to take an orange flavor. KU win had to be earned and will make NU better for the final three outings against Oklahoma State, Iowa State and Oklahoma. Nebraska 31, OSU 7."

Bill Connors

sports editor, Tulsa World

"Oklahoma State's defense is good against the run, particularly straight ahead. Even for a power team like Nebraska, it'll be hard to run over a defense with Ricky Young and Mike Green at linebackers. Green may be an even more spectacular linebacker than Young, but Young rarely makes a mistake. This may be a game where Turner Gill enjoys success throwing the ball. I'll predict Nebraska 21, Oklahoma State 6. But the Huskers will win more decisively, if they find a way to control the ball."

Dave Webber

sports director, WOWT-TV,
Omaha

"I know the Missouri and Kansas games build character, but they don't build my character — they hurt my heart. The Kansas game tired me out. I was exhausted just watching it. I don't know if I can take anymore. All the talking Tom Osborne did all week about Kansas being good and nobody bought it...the fans, the oddsmakers, not even the players. This is an age where the have-nots suddenly have and the traditional powers are finding out about leaner times. The Big Eight is really balanced. Even the bottom two teams can beat you. Everybody thought two losses could never win a national title. Who knows? It's a weird year. Oklahoma State could be a real pit for Nebraska, which seems to bring out the best in kickers. Teams kick more against the Huskers than the June Taylor Dancers. If Kansas can kick five field goals, Oklahoma State can kick four. Nebraska 28, Oklahoma State 12."

Steve Anderson

sports director, KHAS-TV
Hastings

"You figure the Pokes are worth a couple of Larry Roach field goals, resulting from Husker offensive miscues. Overall, however, OSU's offense will be as ineffective as the last five Husker opponents. Look for Nebraska to open up its passing game early to offset a meat-grinding 'Poke defense. A quick NU lead seems essential for two reasons: (1) history dictates a tight, low-scoring affair and (2) Oklahoma State is much like Missouri — the Cowboys play with a lot of emotion and the longer you let them stay in a game, the better they become. Nebraska 17, Oklahoma State 6."

Ron Holt

sports editor, Stillwater News-Press

"The Cowboys' defense is improving each week and putting a lot of pressure on the opposing quarterback. But to beat a team like Nebraska, OSU's young offense needs more consistency than it's shown. It needs to keep the defense off the field more and probably is a year or two away from being able to do that. Despite the momentum created by the Missouri game, it will still be an upset for OSU to win. The Cowboys would have to play their best offensive and defensive game of the year. Nebraska 17, OSU 7."

Ken Hambleton

Lincoln Journal and Star

"If Nebraska gets off to the same slow start it has in the last two games, Oklahoma State could find itself a big upset winner for the second straight week. Huskers will go to the air again, and probably it will be this week in Stillwater. Nebraska 33, Oklahoma State 6. (But don't say I didn't warn you of an upset.)"

The Huskers Say....

Huskers Illustrated

"So Nebraska isn't blowing everyone into the next ozone layer? Is it time to push the panic button? No, it's time to realize that the Cornhuskers are saving perfection for the games that count the most. The offense finds itself again this week in Stillwater, just in time to light the fuse for Iowa State and Oklahoma. A sixth straight win won't be easy, but it'll be impressive. Nebraska 27, Oklahoma State 9."

Coach Osborne's Evaluation

Tom Osborne is all for building character, but Nebraska's head football coach hopes the Cornhuskers don't develop bad habits from their recent struggles against Missouri and Kansas.

"If I had my choice, it's better to start slow and finish fast than the other way around," Osborne said. "But I just don't want us to get into the syndrome where we think we can go out and slop around in the first half and still think we can come back and win."

Basically, Osborne believes that's what the Huskers did against Kansas — slopped around en route to a 9-3 first-half deficit before rallying to dispatch the Jayhawks, 31-15.

"We didn't play well at all in the first half," Osborne said after reviewing the films. "Of course, we started out with three straight turnovers and the forward lateral penalty on the fourth possession was like another turnover," Osborne pointed out.

"When you only get the ball six times in the half and that happens on four of the possessions, you're not going to get much done," he said. "We only had 22 snaps in the first half. It was definitely one of the poorest halves of the season, defensively as well as offensively."

Fortunately, Osborne said, "we came back in the second half with 230 yards and 28 points. The defense came up with some turnovers and only gave up two field goals. Overall, I was pleased with our ability to come back."

The lack of early mental preparation disappointed Osborne because "if you give a team like Kansas some breaks, incentive and encouragement, they're going to be a lot tougher team than they'd be if you scored the first two times you have the ball."

Osborne saw improvement in this year's Kansas team compared to last year's team that was a shut out, 54-0, by Nebraska. But the biggest difference was attitude.

"Last year, we thought Kansas had enough good players that they were capable of beating us, but they didn't seem to think so," Osborne recalled.

"This year," he said, "they felt a lot different about themselves. Anytime you're 5-2, you are going to feel a lot better about yourself than if you're 2-5. Some years, we've hit Kansas when they were already beaten down in their confidence. I feel much better about the Kansas team we played this year."

Osborne was particularly impressed with the Jayhawks' vast improvement on offense. He said KU quarterback Frank Seurer "played a lot better because he's more confident. Their offensive line probably surprised me the most, though."

NU's ninth-year head coach also was impressed with KU tailbacks Walter Mack and Garfield Taylor and flanker Wayne Capers. "It was probably the best offensive game Kansas has played this year," Osborne said. "With seven starters, we knew their defense would be good and we knew their kicking game was outstanding."

The Cornhuskers will run into the same kind of team Saturday at Oklahoma State. The Cowboys are 5-2, thanks to a great defense and an outstanding kicking game.

"They have excellent linebackers," Osborne said, referring to Ricky Young and Mike Green. "They also have a couple of very good down linemen and their offense has a little more stability than it had. They have a lot of speed on offense. John Chesley is a good tight end."

Osborne compares Nebraska's final three games of the regular season — against OSU, Iowa State and Oklahoma — to its first three games against Iowa, Florida State and Penn State.

"I would say that Oklahoma, by the end of the season, will be comparable to Penn State," Osborne said. "And Iowa State and Oklahoma State should compare to Iowa and Florida State. The last three teams we play all have a chance to win the championship and we play two of the three on the road."

Although Osborne is no prophet, "if I would have had to predict the Oklahoma State-Missouri game, I would have guessed Oklahoma State would win," he said. "Missouri was flat against Iowa State, doubly tough against us and had to be down for Oklahoma State, particularly after losing such a hard-fought game."

Osborne said balance in the Big Eight is reflected in the standings. "There are really only two teams out of it and K-State and Colorado have both won big games," he pointed out. "There are still six teams in the league that could get a bowl bid, if they win two out of the last three."

Injury Report

Nebraska head trainer and physical therapist George Sullivan had good news for Cornhusker fans after Saturday's 31-15 victory over Kansas. According to Sullivan, no Huskers are likely to miss this week's game with Oklahoma State as a result of injuries suffered against Kansas. The Cowboys are traditionally among the most physical players in the Big Eight Conference.

There was some question about quarterback Turner Gill's hip after Gill took a hit, which was ruled unnecessary roughness on Kansas strong safety Tim Freiss, late in the first half. Sullivan said Gill "will be pretty sore, but unless it stiffens up more than I think it will, he should be okay."

Among the injured in the Kansas game were Mike Rozier (bruised knee), Irving Fryar (shoulder), and Jeff Merrell (pulled groin), but "I think they'll all be able to play this Saturday," Sullivan said.
